"Oppenheim at his best"

THE LIGHTED WAY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

The advance sale of this brand new mystery story, published May 25, was even in excess of his previous popular success, "Peter Ruff and the Double-Four." We predict that THE LIGHTED WAY will, with the hearty co-operation of the trade, establish a new Oppenheim sales record.

To quote from the very first reviews:

"It is a typical Oppenheim story, with all that author's wealth of descriptive power, character-drawing and a plot in which he is at his best."—Boston Globe.

"It displays, as usual, Mr. Oppenheim's remarkable inventive genius. He is a master story-teller beyond all question."—Boston Transcript.

"A vigorous, well-told tale."—New York Times.

THE LIGHTED WAY is a 355 page book illustrated by A. B. Wenzell, and published at $1.25 net by LITTLE, BROWN & CO., BOSTON

Ready June 1st

AN UNCOMMON NOVEL BY A BRILLIANT WRITER

CAPTAIN QUADRING

By WILLIAM HAY

Author of "Herridge, of Reality Swamp," etc., etc.

ALL who admired William Hay's brilliant novel "Herridge, of Reality Swamp," will be interested in this new book. Its scene is laid in Australia in the convict settlement days. The plot is in essence concerned with the bitter feud of two brothers; it is the drama of two souls set in an atmosphere of high romance. Mr. Hay's faculty for working out a deep psychological study in terms of romance—a faculty which is very uncommon—is displayed even more finely in his new book than it was in the former one.

New Novels of Absorbing Interest

OLIVER'S KIND WOMEN

By PHILIP GIBBS, author of the "Street of Adventure," "The Weak Man and His Folly," etc.

"This is a novel above the average of those put out today, for it is well written and bears the mark of originality."—Pittsburg Post.

EBB AND FLOW

By MRS. IRWIN W. SMART, author of "One Life and the Next."

"A most absorbing story, with the principal scenes laid in Scotland, and with a Scotch flavor that is fascinating."—Salt Lake Herald.

THE ROMANCE OF A STATE SECRET

By WINEFRIDE TRAFFORD-TAUNTON, author of "The Silent Dominion," "The Threshold," etc.

"A historical romance of the time of Charles II. . . . This charming tale is written with dramatic force, and will not fail to hold the reader's attention to the end."—Louisville Times.

THE STOLEN BRIDE

By W. H. WILLIAMSON, author of "The Traitor's Wife," "A Family of Influence," etc.

"A highly romantic novel of Russia in the times of Peter the Great. . . . Striking sentences stud every page like unexpected brilliant stars. A novel of rare tenderness and power."—Exchange.

THE GREATEST NOVEL OF THE YEAR

By the author of

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

THE JUST AND THE UNJUST

A New Novel by VAUGHAN KESTER, author of The Prodigal Judge

THE JUST AND THE UNJUST was begun before The Prodigal Judge and finished afterward, and is stamped with the same creative genius.

In time, place and theme it is strikingly different. Among its many admirable figures are characters worthy to link elbows with those great brothers of laughter, the immortal Bob Yancy and the rotund "Prodigal" Judge himself.

The Just and the Unjust is endowed with the same high and distinguished qualities that make The Prodigal Judge notable as a literary achievement and as a popular success—the charm of style, the vigor of characterization, the play of a robust and human humor.

Frank Crane's Great Books

FRANK CRANE is the most vigorous writer of the day and has more readers than any essayist since Emerson. Three million people follow his daily articles in the leading newspapers. He has no fad, no new creed to offer, but discusses human problems in such a broad, clear, common sense spirit that his books increase the joy of life. An eminent critic says that reading Frank Crane's work is "like walking in a fair upper chamber facing the sunrise."

BUSINESS and KINGDOM COME

If you want to keep in line with the best Twentieth Century commercial methods and ideals, read this live book. It will increase your fortune and happiness in business—stimulate and inspire you to the doing of big things.

"Remarkably breezy, entertaining and thoroughly reliable."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Packed with rich anecdote, ripe reasoning and sound advice. An idea to remember in every paragraph."—Buffalo Express.

"The whole book is pithy, sound, unhackneyed, and independent in thought."
—Chicago Record-Herald.

Cloth. 12mo. Net, 75 cents

HUMAN CONFESSIONS

One hundred and fifteen refreshing essays on the art of living. They are terse, quaint, clear as light, full of heart.

"Frank Crane's work must attract the attention of all intelligent readers."—The Outlook.

"Crisp and thoroughly enjoyable."—The Independent.

"I have had many days' enjoyment in 'Human Confessions.' The book ought to have a million readers."—Bliss Carman.

My Friendship With Prince Hohenlohe

By BARONESS VON HEDEMANN

8vo. With many hitherto unpublished letters. Illustrated.
$2.00 net. By mail, 2.20.

The Baroness, who, after a gloomy and neglected childhood, made a loveless marriage, found herself some years later the victim of a divorce scandal and a social outcast. At this critical time the man of her destiny, the great Prince of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, entered her life. Their attachment was as lasting as it was spontaneous. The book contains many intimate sketches of, and allusions to, people of prominence.

HIGH-PRICED BOOKS.

A COMMUNICATION to the Nation last month, reprinted in a recent issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, takes publishers to task for disregarding the interests of students and libraries by printing books other than novels at unreasonable prices, which makes it impossible for such books to reach the poorer students and the smaller libraries. The pith of the complaint is that the publisher prefers to make an assured sale of eight hundred copies at five dollars net rather than to sell a possible three thousand at one dollar and a quarter net—or, let us say, to strengthen the argument, at one dollar and a half net. The writer points out that the expenditure of ten or fifteen cents extra for large type and thicker paper will make a volume look like a five-dollar book, and implies that this is the frequent practice of publishers. He advises authors that one thousand copies of an ordinary book can be produced for four hundred dollars, and each subsequent thousand for seventy or eighty dollars, and he advises them to seek publishers of less established reputation, who will publish books at a reasonable margin above this cost to everybody's mutual benefit. He asserts that German publishers are even more culpable than American, because of the habit of issuing needless new editions and saddling these upon libraries and students.

This wholesale impeachment of publishers should not be put aside with the word that it is an old, old story, based in large part upon a very old misunderstanding. Some books, doubtless, are priced too high; other books are priced too low, or at least do not return the outlay of the publisher. But as a matter of fact, the practice of the best publishers, those who have succeeded because they have won public confidence, is to base the price of a book upon probable sale and to make this price low enough to obtain the widest practicable sale. Publishers make mistakes on that point, no doubt, and their judgment is very human and very fallible. This is notorious in the case of fiction, and it is quite true also regarding other books. The good publisher will prefer to circulate a good book widely, if he can obtain back a like return as from the same book published at a high price, and therefore limited in its sale. In fact, what the publisher considers first of all is the probable demand. If he has the manuscript complete he can easily figure what it costs to set the book and to put the first copy on the market. These elements of first cost must be divided according to probable sale—and here comes the rub. On the whole, an enterprising and sanguine publisher is apt to overestimate the possible sale for the new book, and thus to score loss instead of profit. These losses must go into the general cost of doing business, and this is the second element in the cost of producing each new book. It is this second consideration which is apt to be overlooked by such writers as the correspondent of the Nation. The easy remedy, as that writer points out, is for the author to make his own arrangements and publish the book on the basis of actual physical cost. But in this case it is the author, who can ill afford to stand the loss, who must take the brunt of any mistake; and the result is very likely to be that for his next book he will prefer the council and co-operation of an established publisher We should be glad to see a price system which would put the more serious books within the reach of poorer students and smaller libraries. A great deal has been done in this direction, but perhaps some publishers do make mistakes in pricing such books too high. We must say, however, in all candor, that it is the desire of the American publishers, as a class, to print and publish books so as to do the largest service to the largest number of readers. If the facts of the publishing business were as some critics would have the public believe, the foremost publishers would be men of very great wealth. As a matter of fact, few callings involve more risk and less net return for the brains they employ. And few classes are more desirous honestly to serve the public.

SOME FEATURES OF A BOOKSELLER'S EQUIPMENT.

By Miss Plummer, of the New York Public Library School.

I presume that the chief reason of my being asked to speak to you is that I have been instrumental in establishing and conducting two vocational schools, both concerned, as you are concerned, with the furthering of the use of books. It has been contended that the pursuits of bookselling and of librarianship are necessarily antagonistic to each other, but librarians, at least, do not see it so.

In order to wish to buy books, people must know and care for books, and if there were no free libraries the great mass of the people would never know any books but their school textbooks, and certainly most of them would not love books on their account. The genuine book-lover, unless he be poorly supplied with this world's goods, does not need the public library. What he wants is to come to your shelves, browse about, and carry home or have sent home the work he wants, regardless of cost. He wants it right at hand the moment he sees or hears of it; he wants to keep it, he wants to lend it. If there is any feeling more delightful than that of the book-lover taking home under his arm a newly bought treasure with the prospect of a long evening ahead of him, in which he can cut the leaves, dip into the pages here and there, read a bit aloud to some appreciative person, and then settle down for an hour's solid enjoyment, I do not know what it is.

But the world is not made up of book-lovers. In proportion, I fear this kind of book-lover may be decreasing, since we live in a world which makes an idol of action rather than of thought or reflection, and uses books chiefly to consult and to further some material object.

One of the things that we are likely to forget is that we must occasionally peer over the edge of the rut we work in and notice that the world is changing, that it is not the world it was twenty or even fifteen years ago, when we thought we had a pretty fair conception of it and made our plans and fixed our ideas accordingly; it is changed, and it is changed in ways that concern us and our affairs, and we must change our methods and plans to match.

People generally do not now have their own libraries, and this applies to people who could afford libraries as well as to those who cannot. They read scarcely anything beyond the papers, the cheaper magazines, and an occasional novel in which there is a great deal "doing." They do not have time to read—when they are not at work they are seeing moving pictures or vaudeville, motoring or flying, either doing something themselves or seeing it done. If there were a disease the opposite of the "sleeping sickness," I should say most Americans nowadays had the symptoms.

The person who does want to read, but to whom the high cost of material necessities forbids indulgence in anything but food, shelter and clothes, who could not afford the prevailing amusements and recreations even if he cared for them, comes to us, since he cannot afford to come to you. Doubtless he would rather buy books if he had the money, or a place to put them. Generally he lives in a flat where no provision is made for anything so useless as books. If it were not for the free libraries, I shudder to think of the fate of such people.

But it is with the children and the young people that the libraries are building for you as well as for themselves. I should guess that nine-tenths of the children under fourteen who frequent the New York Public Library would scarcely ever hold a book in their hands if it were not for some free library, much less own books. But with the propensity of children for looking into every door that is open, they enter the library, find more books and more picture books than they ever saw in their lives, and that they can sit down and look at them in comfort—that that is rather expected of them, in fact, and they become readers for life, many of them. Their attention is drawn to the best books, the best bound, the best illustrated, by setting a number of these apart and making the privilege of reading them a sort of reward of merit, and they learn thus to appreciate the material side of a book. Stories are read and told to them, talks about writers are made to them, bulletins of the birthdays of great characters, with lists of books and articles about them, are posted in the library, and they begin to take an intelligent interest in the inside of the book.

Exhibits of books suitable as Christmas and birthday gifts are made at the libraries, and the grown people who do the giving come, as well as the children, and make out their lists and go away to buy the books. Boys' and girls' clubs are started, such as the city history clubs and they begin very soon to gather together their libraries, books with which they have become acquainted and in which they have become interested through the free libraries. A great many boys, finding books on their favorite subjects in the libraries, which they might otherwise never have come across, form the book-collecting habit as boys, and read and collect along subject lines. Teachers and superintendents come to the libraries from Sunday schools, asylums, orphanages, etc., to look at the library books before doing the wholesale buying that their institutions require. The libraries are habituating children and young people to the constant use of books and they will never be able to do without them; and when fortune favors these book-lovers and appreciators with enough money, they will have libraries of their own. High school librarians are using the same means to make book-owners of their boys and girls.

Libraries also keep many a good book in print and on sale that would otherwise disappear, by their practice of replacing as old copies wear out and are discarded. The private buyer's copy seldom needs replacing.

Finally, we must face the fact that for the majority of readers it is the free library books or none.

In our training of young people as librarians we have found great willingness and interest, steady industry, altruistic enthusiasm, some book knowledge and some love of books, but not as much of these last, take it altogether, as we should like. I imagine that this last may hold true also of many of those who go as clerks and salesmen into bookstores. It is a weak point in a librarian, who is supposed to be able to select and recommend books wisely, and it would be a weak point in any one engaged in the distribution of books unless possibly it were the shipping clerk. I should say that one of the first requisites for a bookseller was an interest in books, not simply as salable articles, but as books. It does not take a customer long to know whether he is dealing with a person who knows books and cares for them, and he will come back to the one who knows and more or less sympathizes with his tastes.

A thorough course of reading for the young bookseller should include a number of books that do not bear directly upon bookselling, just as in the library school we prescribe certain books as inspirational, broadening, humanizing; the lives of book-lovers like Dr. Johnson and Charles Lamb, the letters of readers like Fitzgerald and T. E. Brown; the criticism of men like Hazlitt, Matthew Arnold; the essays of Stevenson and Pater.

It is not enough that the bookseller should have heard of Maeterlinck and Hauptmann and Strindberg by the time everyone has heard of them and their books are translated into English. He should know about them as soon as they begin to attract attention at home, and the only way he can do this is to read the foreign journals and reviews and fasten upon these signs of what is coming, and call the attention of customers interested in literary developments and sure to be grateful for the hint. There is no surer road to popularity than to be able to produce the book the moment it is asked for, from the shelves on this side instead of at a fortnight's delay from the shelves on the other. If the bookseller sees that the "Electra" of Perez Galdos has raised a riot in the theaters of Madrid, it is a good plan to have the play over here at once, ready for the customer who will have read the same news. And in order to read the foreign reviews, the bookseller should have a working knowledge of several modern languages. If I were a bookseller with clerks, I should be inclined to set aside certain books and require the clerks to look through them before they were put on the counters, books on discovery, on inventions, on the news of science and applied science, on new theories, that they might be posted superficially at least on the subjects that are being most written and talked about. Reading the shelves, just in itself, if the books were shelved as they are in libraries, would be a help, because all books on a subject are together and one quickly learns what authors have written on it. All the biographies are together, and if a certain life is not in stock the clerk can call attention to the same person's biography by other authors. But I am told most booksellers shelve by publishers, which doubtless has counter advantages.

I believe the calling does not exist which has not—or at least could not have—its ideal. I was once asked by a young man just beginning a mercantile career at the foot of the ladder, what my ideal would be if I were in the drygoods business, and after a little thought I decided it would be the gradual elevation and purification of the taste of the retail buyer, approximating nearer and nearer the beauty and simplicity of the fabrics of those peoples whose feeling for color and whose sense of art is keener and truer than ours. So in book purveying, the librarian who selects and recommends, and the bookseller who recommends and sells, need an ideal; and it should be a higher one than simply to dispose of the greatest number of best-sellers. There is always the buyer who comes to you knowing perfectly what he wants, and whom you have only to serve accurately and with dispatch; but there is also, in the bookstore as in the library, the potential lover and uninstructed seeker of books who can be guided and inspired in the right direction toward subjects that will offer him a real interest, along lines that will be of genuine profit to him. And here is where a knowledge of a variety of good books is desirable in the bookseller as in the librarian. I suppose there is no more profitable customer than the buyer who gets interested in one subject and reads for a considerable time on that subject, always on the lookout for a rarity or novelty in his chosen field; and to find the book that first inspires this appetite for more may be the fortunate stroke of any bookseller who knows books and sympathizes with readers.

Another qualification for the bookseller as for the librarian is a sense of the dignity of his calling, inspired by a knowledge of its origins, its history and development, its great names and its accomplishments. There are many books treating of the history of learning, of bookmaking and bookselling, many interesting traditions connected with the book-trade, and the dealer who knows these has a consciousness of ancestry which gives him a laudable pride in his calling and makes him unwilling to fall below certain standards set by the past. Those of us who care for books, to whom they are more than mere merchandise, who regard them as material clothing of something which is not itself material, find it painful to see books "promoted" like a patent medicine or a new kind of hair crimper. Doubtless many of the books we handle are worth no more than the patent medicine and do not deserve any more respect, yet we have a feeling that will not down that a real book merits the consideration we grant to a self-respecting person and should not be thrust into people's faces or have its name bawled into their ears on all occasions. It may be that we are simply too sensitive to cumber the ground in a commercialized world where Tono-Bungay sets the pace, but doesn't it seem a pity that there should not be some shore to which real book-lovers with those who cater to them could retire and taste and nibble and devour in peace?

There is a certain bookstore that I know or knew, which has, or did have, a real book atmosphere. The salesmen knew their books, had libraries of their own, would rather take a smaller salary for bookselling than a large one for shoeselling or hardware-selling, chatted with their own customers about the new books and new editions of the old ones, brought out their fine bindings and their best types to be looked at and admired without expectation of selling; and in the heart of the main salesroom there was a little railed-off room with tables and chairs where one might loaf for an hour at a time over a book and no questions be asked. Every bookbuyer in town knew his way to that room, even the people who didn't know what they wanted, only that it must be something in the shape of a book. Everyone knew that if he came there to choose, he got the benefit of the help of people who knew what was absolutely best and what was best under the circumstances of his case, that unless he was determined to do it he would not be allowed to throw away his money on something worthless; and it was such a meeting place for friends that it was more like a club at times than like a shop. I am inclined to think that bookstore did a great deal to raise the level of intelligence and culture in the city where it was placed, and I believe it was financially successful as well. Certainly it has held its own for many years and no rival of any consequence has ever disputed its claim on the community to any extent, or will, until it loses this unusual character and reputation.

A word in regard to books for children. It is not so long since it was thought anyone could write books for children, and even now it is thought that anyone can review them; and magazines in which reviews of adult books can be safely depended on are no guides at all when it comes to juvenile books. Grown people are past the point where their books can be entirely chosen for them, though they may be tactfully guided; but children are helpless and have to take what we give them. Libraries have realized this and the children's rooms have risen to meet the responsibility thus imposed on them. Examination of the book itself has become the rule in nearly all children's libraries, and the eyes of librarians have been opened to the fact that there is much unnecessary and some pernicious writing for children that may as well be discouraged. Children do not call for the newest book and refuse all others, and we have this to help us. They pay no attention to the date of writing or of publication, and have even been known to choose books disgracefully worn and shabby, because their condition showed that many children had read them and they must therefore be interesting. And, by the way, child-logic is a very diverting and illuminating study, we have found. The children's librarians add, therefore, to their stock only the best of current books, and order in large numbers all the good editions of what are called children's classics, the best juvenile books of the Victorian period, and many books ordinarily considered as for adults, but which the boy or girl of twelve to fourteen is quite likely to understand, and which bridge over the gap between the child's interest and those of the adult. It was discovered by the libraries that many children whose reading had been, so to speak, supervised judiciously during the year, were receiving as gifts at Christmas and New Year and on birthdays just the books the libraries had so carefully kept out of their hands. So, as the next step, many libraries have planned exhibits at Christmastime of books suitable for gifts, and these have been visited by hundreds of grown people anxious to "give good gifts to their children," but having no standards of selection or not knowing what exists to choose from.

The names of publishers and dealers and prices accompany the exhibit, so that those making lists can go straight to the shops. In smaller towns the bookseller and the librarian have often worked together to see that the gift selections were good. Through these exhibits our eyes have been opened to the fact that many people must have cheap books if they are to buy books at all. With a family of several children, to be brought up in these days of high prices, every penny counts, and the father who is a workingman or who is on a small salary, and the mother who has to make every quarter do more than its duty, cannot pay a dollar and a half, or even a dollar for a child's book. In one library reporting, the call was for books at twenty-five and fifteen cents. In the city, the books of the department-store collection offered the only solution and not always a good one, since the low price was often a book's only recommendation.

Is there any way in which publishers and dealers can meet this situation and emergency? Are there not books, no longer copyright, which are good in themselves, and which could be published in large editions in durable and sufficiently attractive form at low prices and subscribed for in advance by dealers for the gift-book trade? I dare not be more explicit or detailed in my recommendations, knowing that I am touching on a field of experience not my own. I can only set before you the facts, that there are large numbers of people wanting good books for children at low prices, and that in default of these they buy poor books, poorly written or poorly made, or none at all.

Summing up, what does bookselling do, if it has for its ideal real use to the community? Advertising sense, administrative ability, sensitiveness to the public demand, may promote books as successfully as they promote anything else, but a very necessary factor is left out when these are not accompanied by a knowledge of books and a liking for books on the part of the promoters. Only when these exist does bookselling escape classification as a purely commercial occupation and take rank close to the professions. It distributes books for recreational purposes, of course, and there is no harm in that, provided they are truly recreational and not demoralizing; but beyond this it spreads knowledge, and beyond this it spreads ideas, and ideas are the absolutely essential thing for the world's life and progress. We need to be fed with ideas as regularly as with material food, if the world is not to stop in its tracks and begin to retrograde. Let them be false or mistaken ideas, new ones will arise to combat them, and in the combat is life. The moment we begin to regard a book as the clothing of ideas, thoughts, it becomes again sacred as in the days when printing was a new art, and we can then no more destroy it, illtreat it, or regard it indifferently, than we could destroy beauty by going out of our way to trample a flower or to throw a stone at a bird.

PART II. OF HUTH LIBRARY

GOES ON SALE AT SOTHEBY'S, LONDON, NEXT WEEK—2596 LOTS—FIVE CAXTONS AND OTHER RARE ITEMS.

THE sale of the second part of the famous Huth library, after Robert Hoe's, perhaps the most valuable and important private collection of books and manuscripts that has ever come into the public market, will take place at Sotheby's in London on June 5 and the seven following week-days (except Saturday). As in Part I., the alphabetical arrangement is followed,, and the books now to be sold fall in place under the letters C and D. There are 2,596 lots.

Foremost among the rarities are the Caxtons, consisting of five examples of the issues of the first English printing press. One of the five is a copy of the second edition of "The Game and Play of the Chess," printed by Caxton at Westminster about 1481. Only two perfect copies of this edition are known, one at Trinity College, Cambridge, the other belonging to the Duke of Devonshire. In all only ten copies are extant, perfect and imperfect. The Huth example has a page supplied in facsimile. Caxton's work was principally taken from Jean de Vignay's French version of a Latin treatise by Jacobus de Cessolis, a preaching friar, who lived in the thirteenth century.

Another Caxton is the first edition of Geoffrey Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," printed at Westminster about 1478. It has sixteen leaves in facsimile. Only two perfect copies of this edition are known. There is here, however, a large and perfect copy of the "Christine de Pisan," printed by Caxton in 1489. It was obtained at the Libri sale in 1862. The operatic singer, Mario, sold it to Libri.

CAXTON'S CICERO TRANSLATION.

Perfect also is Caxton's translation of Cicero's "Treatises of Old Age and Friendship, with the Declaration of Noblesse." Henry Huth obtained it at J. O. Halliwell's sale in 1857.

The fifth Caxton example is a tall, fine copy of "The Doctrinal of Sapience," printed at Westminster in 1489. Two leaves are in facsimile. Only nine copies of this work are known. The "Chastising of God's Children," printed about 1491, is usually ascribed to the press of Caxton, but Blades says, "The use of a title-page, a practice unknown to Caxton, the appearance of Type No. 7, and the adoption of signatures having three sheets only—all point to Wynkyn de Worde, rather than to Caxton, as the printer of this book." Only six perfect copies of this rarity are known.

The press of Wynkyn is represented by a rare first edition of Johannes Capgrave's "Nova Legenda Angliae," printed in 1516, and by a hitherto undescribed edition of Cato's "Moralia cum Scholüs Erasmi Roterodami," 1532. There are also in this sale two productions of the press of Wynkyn's rival in business, Richard Pynson, who was a Norman by birth. One of the Pynson books is a 1506 edition of John Capgrave's "Legende of Englande." It is exceedingly rare, there being no record of any other copy having appeared in the public market. The other Pynson book is the "Works of Geoffrey Chaucer," London, 1526, the first attempt at a collection of that author's writings.

EARLY AMERICAN VOYAGES.

The two entries which make the greatest display are those of Theodore de Bry and Daniel de Foe. The celebrated "Voyages to America" and "Voyages to the East Indies," edited by De Bry, his widow, his two sons and his two sons-in-law, consist of eighty-eight volumes folio, and their bibliographical description occupies forty-two pages of the Huth sale catalogue. The "Voyages to America" is in thirteen Latin parts and in fourteen German parts, and the "Voyages to the East Indies" in twelve Latin and thirteen German parts. This set of the major and minor "Voyages," as they are called, is one of the finest and most perfect ever offered. It comprises all of the first and most of the later editions.

De Foe's writings are arranged in 193 lots, and will take up the whole of the sale on June 12. Thirty pages of the Huth catalogues are devoted to this prolific writer, of which "Robinson Crusoe" occupies only half a page. The De Foe collection will be offered en bloc, as the Lord Byron collection was offered in Part I. of the Huth sales, but, if the reserve price is not reached the De Foe items will be sold piecemeal.

Cervantes is well represented. There is, to begin with, a first issue of the first part of the Madrid, 1606, "El Ingenioso Hidalgo Don Quixote de la Mancha." Following this comes a first issue of the second part, 1618. These two rarities belonged at one time to Claude Pellot, first president of the Parliament of Normandy. There is also a copy of the excessively rare second genuine edition of the first part of this famous work. It may be distinguished from the first edition by the words "de Castilla, Aragon y Portugal," which follow the words "Con priuilegio" in the title in the genuine second, but are not found in the first, the author having been led to solicit a privilege for the whole of the Peninsula by reason of the piracy of his book at Lisbon as soon as the first edition appeared.

Among the books dealing with America are the rare imprints of the first and second editions of the "Letter" of Christopher Columbus to Luis de Santangel. The earlier of the two consists of four leaves, with thirty-three lines to the page. It is without name of printer or date, but was printed at Rome by Stephen Planck in 1493. Only a few copies are known. The other edition was printed at Rome in the same year. It consists of three leaves, forty lines to the page.

1524 PLAN OF MEXICO CITY.

Of the "Praeclara de Nova Maris Oceana Hyspania Narratio" of Fernando Cortes, there is the editio prima Latina, printed at Nuremberg in 1524, and the first Italian issue, which appeared in Venice the same year. The latter has the large folding plan of the City of Mexico, copied from the Nuremberg edition. There are also three early editions of the "Cosmographiae Introductio," the first part of which is by Martin Waldseemüller, who was the first person to suggest that the newly discovered continent should be named America after Amerigo Vespuccio.

The works of Dante begin with a fine copy of the rare first edition of the "Divina Commedia," printed at Foligno in 1472, and a copy of the even rarer issue printed at Jesi in the same year. Only six copies of the Jesi edition are known, and of these the Huth example is the only perfect one. The large copy of the Florence, 1481, edition, has brilliant impressions of Baccio Baldini's engravings after the designs of Sandro Botticelli. This is the largest number ever issued with this edition of Dante.

ELIZABETHAN ITEMS.

There are some examples of early English works that appeal to students of Shakespeare. For example, there is the play by Lady Elizabeth Carew, "The Tragedie of Marian, the Faire Queene of Jewry," London, 1613, to which Shakespeare refers in "Troilus and Cressida." William Cartwright's "Comedies, Tragi-Comedies, with Other Poems," London, 1651, recalls to mind that its author in his "Eulogy of Fletcher" puts Shakespeare below Fletcher.

There are also references to Shakespeare, Daniel, Chapman, Drayton, and other contemporary authors in Henry Chettle's "Englande's Mourning Garment: Worne here by Plain Shepheardes; in memorie of their Sacred Mistress, Elizabeth, Queene of Vertue While Shee Lived, and Theame of Sorrow, being dead," London, 1603. Chettle alludes in this work to Shakespeare under the name of Melicert, and seems to intimate that the great poet and dramatist had received from Elizabeth special marks of favor, which he ought to requite by some tribute to her memory.

Another rarity is "The Wisdom of Doctor Dodypoll. As it hath beene sundrie times Acted by the Children of Powles," London, 1600. Not more than half a dozen copies are known. Shakespeare, it is said, influenced the writer of this play. There is a reference to Shakespeare's "Lucrece" in Michael Drayton's "Tragicall Legend of Robert Duke of Normandy, surnamed Shortthigh, eldest sonne to William Conqueror. With the Legend of Mathilda, the Chast, daughter to the Lord Robert Fitzwater, poysoned by King John. And the Legend of Piers, Gaueston, the great Earle of Cornwall, and mighty favorite of King Edward the second," London, 1596. The only other copies known are those in the British Museum and at Brittwell.

A curious, rare, and interesting tract, printed in London in 1648, and attributed to John Taylor, the water-poet, is "A Brown Dozen of Drunkards (All-ass Drink-hards) whipt, and shipt to the Isle of Gulls; for their abusing of Mr. Malt, the bearded son, and Barley-broth, the brainless daughter, of Sir John Barley-corne. All joco-seriously descanted to our Wine-drunk, Wrath-drunk, Zeale-drunk, staggering Times. By one that hath drunk at St. Patrick's Well."

The conspicuous general feature is the extraordinary series of English plays and poems, almost every writer, from the late sixteenth to the early eighteenth century, being represented. There are twenty lots of Susannah Centlivre's plays and about the same number of the works of George Chapman. Among the other well-known names are Thomas Churchyard, Colley Cibber, William Congreve, Abraham Cowley, John Growne, Samuel Daniel, Sir William Davenant, John Davies of Hereford, Thomas Decker (or Dekker), John Dryden, William Drummond, and Thomas D'Urfey.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Other noteworthy items are: A collection of early seventeenth century Dutch-American broadsides, connected with the West Indies and South America, all of great rarity; several lots of the English civil war tracts; various editions of the "Chronicles of the Cid," in Spanish; a large number of chap books; the 1677 "Directory for London," the first of its kind attempted, and giving the name and address of the merchant who was the father of Alexander Pope, the poet.

Of the manuscripts, the finest is the "Chroniques de St. Denis," a French production of the fourteenth century on 375 richly illuminated leaves, and with fifty fine large square miniatures. It is said to be one of the treasures of St. Denis, which did not pass into the Paris Bibliotheque at the time of the French Revolution. Another fine manuscript is a German chronicle, composed entirely in rhymed verse, dating from about the end of the fourteenth century, extending to 860 pages, large folio, and illustrated with 204 curious paintings.

Another chronicle of great association interest relates to "Don Alfonso el Onzeno," and bears the Valladolid 1554 imprint. It is bound in one volume with three other Valladolid chronicles. The volume is from the collection of Hanrott.

RUSSELL DOUBLEDAY MADE A FIRM MEMBER.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY have just admitted Russell Doubleday into the firm. He became secretary of the company, succeeding Henry W. Lanier, who retires from active business.

Russell Doubleday will concern himself with the editorial and artistic interests of the house in both the book and magazine departments.

NEWS OF THE BOOK TRADE IN CANADA.

BUSINESS conditions throughout the Dominion continue favorable, says the special correspondent of the English Publishers' Circular. Actual business is quiet, in keeping with the general state of affairs throughout the country. The cold weather has lasted longer than usual, and spring is backward. This has interfered with many trades, and it indirectly affects the book trade.

It will be gratifying to British publishers to learn that there has of late been a most appreciable increase in the demand for fiction by British authors. Not so long ago the average novel reader in Canada gave the preference to an American story—such work as is produced by writers like Robert W. Chambers, George Barr McCutcheon, or Harold McGrath. Now it is by no means so difficult to interest him in a good English novel. Of course, the American novelists still sell in large quantities, but there is a noticeable desire for a change in literary fare, and this is being provided from England.

The success of Arnold Bennett's books in Canada has been comparatively phenomenal. One local publishing house, which has been specializing in his works, has now a list of sixteen titles. The surprising part of the sale is that, in a market where the demand is largely for new titles, such a remarkable number of old titles should be disposed of. This same house informs your correspondent that this season they have sold over 10,000 volumes by authors who, while well known in England, are almost unknown in Canada.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that Canadian publishers are adopting the plan of producing uniform bindings for their various popular authors. The idea was first noted in the case of W. J. Locke's novels, which are published in Canada by Henry Frowde. These appear in a light green binding, with white lettering. The novels of E. Temple Thurston are also appearing in a uniform dark green binding. The Arnold Bennett series is coming out in a red binding, and the works of G. A. Birmingham, which are being pushed just now, are in a corresponding green style. It is contended that a psychological influence is exerted on the bookbuyer by this means.

RECENT AUCTION SALES.

THE grand total for the two days' sales of the libraries of John B. Gleason of New York and Mrs. Henry P. Quincy of Boston in the Anderson Galleries last week was $14,446.65. Gabriel Weis paid $130 for the writings of Anthony Trollope of an edition limited to 250 copies. Another set of Trollope's writings, also of a limited edition of 250 copies, brought $170.

The works of Whyte-Melville, edited by Sir Herbert Maxwell, went for $120.

Mr. Weis gave $730 for a set of the works of Thackeray, fifty-two volumes, newly bound in polished green levant morocco. There were extra illustrations by the insertion of colored frontispieces to each volume and of a series by George Cruikshank. Mr. Weis also paid $275 for a letter written by Gen. Grant to Gen. Meade on the evening after the battle of Petersburg.

Scribner's Sons obtained for $120 "Le Costume Historique," by Racinet, illustrated with 500 plates. The works of George Meredith, in thirty-six volumes, went to Curtis Wallers for $121.

AT the sale of the American historical library of Thomas J. Moffatt in Philadelphia, George D. Smith bought the fine set of Audubon's "Birds of America" in the nine volumes for $3,200, the highest price of the sale. He also obtained against the field the rare Morton's "New England Memorials," Cambridge, 1669, for which he paid $540, and for a like sum he secured the equally scarce "Description of New England," by Capt. John Smith, London, 1616.

"The Early Laws of Massachusetts" were sold at from $7, at which the 1782 laws went, to $65, at which figure the rare 1696 acts and laws of the Province of Massachusetts Bay were knocked down. High prices were given for some early William Penn and Quaker tracts. "The Answer to the Seditious and Scandalous Pamphlet on the Trial of W. Penn and W. Mead," London, 1671, sold for $34; Penn's "Truth Reserved," London, 1670, fetched $16, and for Penn's "Epistle of Farewell," London, 1699, $23 was paid.

A PLEA FOR HONEST ADVERTISING.

IN connection with the National Convention of Advertising Clubs, in Dallas, Herbert S. Houston, of Doubleday, Page & Company, delivered an address on "Advertising and Righteousness" in the Ervey Street Methodist Church. While disclaiming that this address could be called a lay sermon, Mr. Houston said there was no doubt that clerical sermons were advertising, that is, they declared the merits of something to someone likely to be interested, in this case—righteousness. He defined advertising as expression with a purpose—self-expression, community expression, church expression, trade expression, and its relation to righteousness, as when it embraced the broader virtues of rightness, squareness, and honest dealing.

"Advertising needs to be standardized and purified, so that it may more effectively do its work in the world," Mr. Houston continued. "Advertising may be wasteful and harmful, it may be deceitful and dishonest, or it may be trained, efficient and honest, a mighty force, working for fair dealing and human progress. It is to serve honest, clean and efficient advertising that this convention is assembling in Dallas. And am I not right in linking this kind of advertising with righteousness? For in this great democracy, advertising is the bulwark of business against monopoly, the appeal of the seller to buyers in a free market.

"We are reforming advertising from within. We see the great place it has come to have in the world, and we realize that it has come to that place through the sheer need the world had for it. Of course, a power with such elemental and inherent potency was bound to be used dishonestly by the dishonest and unwisely, by the foolish and the ignorant. Advertising was first pounced upon by the faker and the quack with the eagerness of the old practicers of black art when they thought they had discovered alchemy. Even to this day they remain in some quarters a noisome pestilence, breeding trouble. The only kind of advertising that pays is honest advertising.

"The time is past when a publisher can cling to such an outworn sophistry as 'Let the buyer beware.' In its place has come the view that the publisher is a guardian of the public, and that he must not permit, knowingly, any dishonest or unclean thing to be borne in pages that he controls across the threshold of a single home. My partner, Walter Page, often says that no publication is better than its worst advertisement. And that is not an exceptional view. It is fast becoming the common one."

THE SHERWOOD FAILURE.

A MEETING of the creditors of Sherwoods, Inc., was held May 21 at its place of business, 144 Fulton Street, New York, and D. W. Steele, Jr., stated the assets amounted to $32,000, not including the lease, and the liabilities were $35,000, and $26,000 for promissory notes of the company, which were discounted and for which no consideration was given, and from which the company received no benefit, and that some nineteen or twenty suits have been instituted, and that the referee would have to pass on these claims.

Mr. Steele said that some thirty claims had already been proven out of a total of three hundred and seventy creditors, and a reorganization plan had been submitted and a new company incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000—$10,000 in common stock and $40,000 in preferred stock—and he suggested that Joseph G. Quinn, Jr., act for the creditors, who would eventually receive 100 per cent. settlement, without expense.

Charles K. Carpenter, the receiver, stated he had cash on hand of $1260, and the books show accounts payable of $11,814; rent due, $1525; bank and merchandise notes, $26,225; or total liabilities of $39,564, with doubtful notes of $26,250, making a total of $65,814. The assets, when he took possession, were $25,976, to which he added $235. His sales as receiver amounted to $1915, less 30 per cent., or $1368, or a net amount on hand of $24,843. The furniture and fixtures were estimated by the company at $6227, and the receiver estimated the furniture, fixtures and stock at $31,070, with accounts receivable of $1361, would make the assets $32,431. Twenty-five hundred dollars has been on hand with the landlord under the lease, which runs for five years, with an option of five years addition, at a rental of $13,500 for the first year or two, and an increase thereafter of $1000 each year. The receiver stated he did not think the lease could be included as an asset. The sales have averaged from $95 to $100 per day, with expenses of $65, including rent, but not including legal expenses, and he stated he did not feel justified in continuing the business.

Mr. Sherwood stated that, previous to the receiver taking charge, the sales were double; that business has been bad, partly owing to bad weather, and that he has two tenants for the two upper floors of the building for $1800 and $4500. He stated a forced sale would result badly for all parties. He thought 100 per cent. could be paid to the creditors by putting in some new lines and continuing the business.

Leo Frank, representing the H. B. Claflin Company, one of the larger creditors, stated that as the receiver had been running the business at a loss, he thought it would be unwise for him to continue until a trustee could be elected, which would take probably twenty days, and in the meantime the estate would lose some $800. Mr. Frank's idea was to sell the merchandise now, let the new company buy it in, and when the doubtful note claims were proven they could be objected to. Mr. Frank finally moved that the stock be appraised and an early sale be advertised, and that the stock be sold in bulk, including the lease and fixtures, or rather the receiver's right to the same.

Mr. Steele said the stock would have to be sold to a friendly party, and he did not approve of a quick sale, as the new company must have new capital and get the lease, and there was no one at present to bid in the stock.

The receiver stated the sale, of course, would have to be for the best price obtainable in the creditors' interests, and that the stock was not attractive at a forced sale.

Mr. Frank said if the stock was sold in July it would not bring near as much as if sold now, and that the meeting should pass a resolution authorizing a sale. Mr. Frank's motion was finally carried.

The following poster, which was displayed later in the week in the Sherwood windows explains itself:

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

Seems to indicate that every library built by Mr. Carnegie is a monument to his memory; also a headstone to the commercial grave of a retail bookseller. 'Tis sad, but true. Consequently, this store will be closed for a few days preparing the stock for distribution by auction. As soon as alterations are made a modern moving-picture theater will be operated here under the personal management of Mr. R. E. Sherwood.

POSTAL MATTERS.

WORLD-WIDE PENNY POSTAGE.

THE Swiss Chamber of Commerce has taken the initiative with respect to world-wide penny postage, which it will advocate at the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce, to be held at Boston, beginning September 24 next.

HITCHCOCK ENDORSES BOURNE BILL.

IN a report to the Senate Post Office Committee made public May 26th, Postmaster-General Hitchcock unqualifiedly endorses the Bourne bill, providing for a zone system of parcels post. Mr. Hitchcock said that the consolidation of the third and fourth classes of matter would greatly facilitate the administration of his department. The delivery of parcels to the limit of eleven pounds on all rural routes, and within the delivery limits of free-carrier offices, was likewise approved as economic and a convenience to the public.

The establishment of units of area of invariable dimensions on the basis of latitude and longitude, and various charges for the several zones was referred to as certain to lessen the cost of transportation, to stimulate the general trade in small wares, increase postal revenues and pave the way for other postal reforms.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

ITALIAN CINEMATOGRAPH RESERVATIONS.

ITALY has issued an explanatory circular concerning reservations of copyright on cinematograph productions.

AUSTRO-SPANISH TREATY.

SPAIN, by a decree of April 1, 1912, and Austria, by one of April 13, 1912, have entered into an agreement for the protection of copyright, based on reciprocity law.—(Droit d'Auteur, May 15, 1912.)

COURT JURISDICTION—PERFORMANCE NOT PUBLICATION.

IN the case of Frohman vs. Ferris, heard before the United States Supreme Court, February 19, 1912, the defendants contested the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that the bill was based entirely on a common law right of property, and that the upholding of this right raised no federal question. The defendant's play, however, had been copyrighted in the United States, and the fact that the State court reached its conclusion in favor of the complainants by a consideration of common law principles of their property did not alter the decision. The substantial identity of the plays was not disputed. British statutes do not purport to curtail any right of authors with respect to the representation of plays outside the British dominions. The complainants' play had not been printed and published (though performed), and therefore the owner was not deprived of his common law rights, save by operation of statute. Justice Hughes, who read the opinion of the court affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of Illinois, confirmed previous decisions that performance did not constitute publication.—(223 U. S., 424.)

NOTICE ON SHEETS OF SEPARABLE DESIGNS.

THE decision in De Jonge & Co. vs. Breuker & Kessler Co., in the United States Circuit Court in 1910, summarized in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of July 1, 1911, was affirmed by the Court of Appeals through Judge Lanning, November 6, 1911. The decision was to the effect that a single notice on a sheet containing a dozen copies of a copyrighted painting is not in compliance with the statute.—(191 F. R., 35.)

COPYRIGHT NOTICE ON MAPS.

IN Woodman vs. Lydiard-Paterson Co. Judge Willard in the Circuit Court of Minnesota decided, Jan. 17, 1912, that in the case of a book, "Woodman's Minnetonka Map Directory," containing proper notice of copyright, the attached map was covered by the copyright notice in the book. He held further "that the notice on the map itself is sufficient. It contains the words 'Copyright, 1908.' To be sure, it does not say, by P. M. Woodman, nor does it say, copyrighted by Woodman; but nobody can have any doubt upon reading this language that Woodman was the man who procured the copyright. . . . In that case [Osgood v. Aloe Instrument Co., 83 F. R., 470] there was no statement by whom it was published, as there is in this case. We also have the statement on the map that it was published by the Woodman Publishing Company, and we have on the title page the words 'Woodman's Minnetonka Map Directory.' I do not see any reason for a strict construction of the law. My recollection is that the strictness required by the former act has been materially modified by the present one. The object is to notify persons who is the owner of the publication, and the person by whom it is copyrighted, so that, if they make copies, they may know that they are infringing upon somebody's copyright. While it is probably material that some name be stated, yet I do not think that it is essential that the initials of the person should be given. I therefore pass that contention by, holding that there was sufficient notice given of the copyright as required by law." Securing the material from other publications which were not copyrighted did not prevent him from getting a copyright upon this map, if it constituted a new arrangement of old material. The complainant's map also contained some original features. The defendant had a right to take from the same sources, but not make an exact copy of the complainant's map, and thereby save the expenditure of time and labor which the complainant was compelled to expend in order to make the map. Quoting section 25, permitting the recovery of damages, in this case $250, "It cannot be possible that, where the court is of the opinion that there were no damages at all, it still is bound to allow $250, and that, where the court is of the opinion that it would be a matter of injustice to allow even $1, it would be compelled by law to allow $250. . . . I think it means that where the court is satisfied that there are substantial damages, but the evidence is incomplete or is insufficient, so that the court cannot determine just what the damages are, then it may allow them on that basis. But wherever the court is of the opinion that the damages cannot be more than $50 or $100, it should not allow $250." Evidence showed the damages to be $50, as the maps were distributed gratis. But it was suggested that if a thousand of these maps were thus distributed, the defendant lost that many sales. "But such a presumption is altogether too violent." The judge allowed, therefore, but $75 damages and a permanent injunction and costs. It is doubtful whether some of these rulings would be accepted as good law or upheld by the higher courts. (192 F. R., 67.)

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE second of the series of book trade lectures under the auspices of the Booksellers' League was given Tuesday afternoon last at the Liberal Club, 132 East 19th Street, by Miss Plummer, of the New York Public Library School. It is reprinted elsewhere in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

The attendance was large, and interest shown in the lecture and discussion which followed most gratifying to those having the lectures in charge. Among those who brought out valuable points, supplementary to Miss Plummer's paper, during the discussion which followed it, was Miss Theresa F. Thompson, of G. P. Putnam's Sons. She said, in part:

"I am glad to endorse what Miss Plummer has said of the power that lies in the book clerk's hands to direct reading, especially juvenile reading. And to do that, one must know the books. If the question is simply to work off a book that lingers on the shelves, I think the one thing to do is to read it. If not all, at least the title page, preface, and half a dozen pages. The children's department has a distinct advantage in that the books do not need to change, as there are always new children. It is possible so to win the confidence of both parents and children that they will come to ask about books seen in other stores. 'Is that something I can read?' At Christmas at least eight people out of ten say, 'I want a book for a girl of ten, or a boy of twelve,' and leave the choice to the clerk's recommendation. But one must build for that confidence all through the year. It is always a surprise to me that more intelligent, educated women do not see here a work equal in importance and responsibility to the work of the librarian and teacher. I have had girls who came to me for their books until I sent out their graduation engagement and wedding presents, and now they are coming for rag books, and I am starting the cycle again."

COMMUNICATIONS.

MANUSCRIPT STOLEN.

MONTREAL, May 27, 1912.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: The ladies of the congregation of Notre Dame, of Montreal, a noble body of women, who have devoted their lives to Christian instruction since Canada was first settled, have been robbed of their "Letters Patent," a document on parchment signed and sealed by Louis XIV., King of France. They too trustingly filed it in court instead of a copy.

They are in great distress over its loss, a year or so ago. This they only communicated to me last week, and I hasten to beg the good offices of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, as I feel certain, through its large circulation, we will learn of it and effect its recovery.

Your obedient servant,
DAVID ROSS MCCORD.

BEGINNING with the June issue, the Adventure Magazine will be enlarged by thirty-two additional pages, making it a periodical of 224 pages.

APRIL ushered in a new monthly devoted to people, politics, and national affairs entitled Worth While, published by Worth While Publishing Company, Washington, D. C.

MCBRIDE, NAST & CO. have published a new quarterly this year called The Boat Buyer. It is a profusely illustrated periodical devoted to boats, their construction, equipment, etc. It is for the man who wants information about the proper engine for boats and where to get it. It contains plans for all sorts of power boats.

DONALD MCNAUGHTON, for some time past with the circulation department of the Crowell Publishing Company's periodicals, in Springfield, O., has left for New York to become assistant circulation manager of the Cosmopolitan. Before locating in Springfield Mr. McNaughton was connected with Doubleday, Page & Co.

Hampton's Magazine, in its last reorganized form, has finally given up the ghost. On the collapse of the Columbian-Sterling Publishing Company, last fall, a new company was formed under the leadership of A. Gordon Murray, receiver of the old company, which has attempted to continue the publication of the magazine. The new company was handled most economically, but it was not able to persuade the old stockholders to put up enough additional capital to keep it running. Altogether, nearly 24,000 stockholders have lost about $2,600,000 in the various vicissitudes of Hampton's.

P. F. Collier & Son, Inc., announce that on June 1 Miss Katherine Leckie will become managing editor of The Housekeeper. Miss Leckie is well known in magazine circles in New York, where she was for some years editor of the Woman's (New Idea) Magazine, following a varied and successful newspaper experience. For the past year she has been in Chicago, in charge of the woman's page of the Scripps McRae newspapers. Bruce Barton, who has edited The Housekeeper for the past ten months, resigns, to become associated with Mr. Conde Nast in the publication of Vogue, and in his other publishing properties.

"The Coming of the Arabian Nights," Part I., by Ameen Rihani, leads the special articles in the June Bookman. It is followed by "Gems of Genius," by Edna Kenton; "Literary Treasures of the Humble," by Francis Arnold Collins; "The Story of the Tile Club," by Louis Baury; "H. C. Bunner and His Circle," by Henry Gallup Paine; and "A New Novelist of Old Ireland," by William Aspenwall Bradley. Of special interest is an article by Clayton Hamilton on "Strindberg in America," "Mankind in the Mass, and Some Recent Novels," by Frederic Taber Cooper covers reviews of "The Department Store," "Blinds Down," "The Lure," "The Chink in the Armour," "The Position of Peggy," "Oliver's Kind Women," and "The Night of Fire." Among other books reviewed this month are "The Promised Land," "The Women of To-morrow," "The Just and the Unjust," and "The Recording Angel."

PERSONAL NOTES.

Henry Bellamy, of the Kendrick-Bellamy Stationery Company, of Denver, Col., was married last week to Miss Fredericka Le Flore, also of that city.

Floyd Haven Nourse, buyer for the book department of the Emporium, San Francisco, was married, May 2, to Miss Mazie King, of New York. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. Martin, superintendent of the Emporium.

Theodore Dreiser, who has been in England and on the Continent all the winter, is now back in America, at work on his new novel, "The Financier." A series of magazine articles embodying Mr. Dreiser's impressions of Europe is also to be expected.

American readers of the Hibbert Journal will be interested in learning that its editor, Lawrence P. Jacks, is shortly to visit the United States. He is better known to Americans, probably, as the author of three notable books—"The Alchemy of Thought," "Mad Shepherds," and "Among the Idol Makers."

It is good to hear that the oldest of English publishers, Edward Marston, although he has recently entered his eighty-eighth year, is still wonderfully hale and well in the country where he is spending his retirement. He knows the art of being "retired," and that is a great thing for one who has been accustomed to a busy life.

Fred J. Rymer, managing director of Sampson Low, Marston & Company, was a visitor at the office of the Publishers' Weekly this week, stopping in this city en route from Canada, where he has been placing the Canadian edition of Jeffery Farnol's new novel. He reports, by the way, that sales of the "Broad Highway" in this country exceeded the English sales many times over.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Harper & Brothers have ready the first six volumes of a uniform illustrated edition of the "Complete Writings of William Dean Howells."

Laird & Lee have ready Thomas H. Russell's excellent narrative, "The Great Titantic Disaster," well illustrated and issued in both paper and cloth covers.

"Rambles with John Burroughs," a series of essays by R. J. H. De Loach, with illustrations from photographs by the author, is just published by Richard G. Badger.

The bitter feud between two brothers makes the plot of "Captain Quadring," by William Hay, a novel of Australia, published to-day by Dana Estes & Co.

The Royal Society of Literature will award its gold medal to Thomas Hardy on his birthday to-morrow. The last recipient was George Meredith.

Harper & Brothers publish this week "The Street Called Straight," a new novel by Basil King, author of "The Inner Shrine." The same firm is also sending to press "The Heritage of the Desert," by Zane Grey, author of the recently published "Riders of the Purple Sage."

The recent death of Major Butt on the Titantic gives especial interest to his book, "Both Sides of the Shield," a romance of a Northern newspaper correspondent on special duty in the South, published by J. B. Lippincott Co. "The Penitent," by Rene Bazin, is published this week by the same firm.

A man of wealth, living in luxury and lacking all the qualities of manhood and citizenship, is the central figure of Mrs. W. B.

Maxwell's "In Cotton Wool," just published by D. Appleton & Co. "The Price She Paid," by David Graham Phillips, comes from the same firm this week.

A SURVEY of Jewish life, thought and achievement has been made by Dr. Abram Isaacs in a volume entitled "What is Judaism?" which G. P. Putnam's Sons have just published The author throws new light on the history, literature, services and present status of the Jews.

"WORKING ONE'S WAY Through College and University," by Calvin Dill Wilson (McClurg), deals with the opportunities for self-help at various schools, the organizations which interest themselves in getting work for students, and the kind of jobs which have actually been instrumental in making it possible for young people to work their way through school.

THE thoughtful public has learned to recognize Leonard Merrick as a writer of unusual power—one who has mastered the art of combining fiction with social philosophy without doing damage to either. His eighth volume to be published in this country, "Whispers About Women," a book of short stories, has just come from his publisher, Mitchell Kennerley.

FORBES & COMPANY, of Chicago, have recently published three new volumes by Frank Crane—"Business and Kingdom Come," an optimistic consideration of Twentieth-century business ideals; "God and Democracy," an original discussion of the idea of God; and "Lame and Lovely," a book of essays in the style of the author's "Human Confessions."

DANGERS, escapes, bloodshed and intrigues are found in plenty in "The Friar of Wittenberg," by William Stearns Davis, just published by the Macmillan Co. At the same time, the story gives a vivid picture of the times of Martin Luther, whose influence is the dominating element of the book, though the reformer himself does not occupy a prominent place among the characters.

WITH one of the greatest political campaigns in our history in progress, books on questions of the day are in special demand. J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company are just issuing a volume of short speeches by the Hon. William Sulzer, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, giving political history for the past quarter of a century and discussing many live topics and matters of public moment.

THE RONALD PRESS CO. have in preparation a comprehensive series of practical works on accounting to be issued under the general title of the Ronald Accounting Series. This series will be written by American accountants, will comprise some fifty titles, and when complete will correspond for this country to the well-known Accountants' Library of England. In addition to its more general volumes, the series will cover the specific accounts of all the more important branches of business and the professions.

AUGUSTE STRINDBERG, the great Swedish dramatist, died at that moment when the circle of his fame had touched this country. Several of his plays had been produced here this last season in a small way; that volume of them, containing "The Link," "The Dream Play," and "The Dance of Death" (Charles Scribner's Sons), had recently appeared; another play, "There are Crimes and Crimes," is just issued, and the publication of several others is also contemplated by the Scribners.

"FRECKLES," the first "best seller" written by Gene Stratton-Porter, whose subsequent books, "A Girl of the Limberlost" and "The Harvester," have likewise enjoyed great success, has been dramatized and for the last two weeks has been making a successful tour of New York State. After the play has been thoroughly tried out, it will be given a metropolitan production. Mrs. Stratton-Porter's "Moths of the Limberlost" is scheduled for publication by Doubleday, Page & Co. in June.

IT appears that Payne Erskine, author of "The Mountain Girl," is Mrs. Emma Payne Erskine, formerly of Racine, Wis., and now of North Carolina, where the scenes of her story are laid. Eleven years ago this author created a heated discussion with her first book, "When the Gates Lift Up Their Heads," which brought down the wrath of Southerners because the heroine was permitted to marry an estimable young man after it was disclosed that he had negro blood in his veins.

FOR real values, it is difficult to surpass the teachers' Bibles issued by the Saalfield Publishing Company. A careful examination of their large line will show that all the styles are now printed on imported paper, and the presswork and binding is turned out by experts in Bible making, while prices are exceedingly attractive to the trade. A new feature added to several of their Bibles this year is that of sixteen most handsome colored plates, scenes from the life of Christ as depicted by the world's greatest artists.

"THE GOLIGHTLYS: FATHER AND SON," just published by Doran, is a humorous recital of ingenious rascality in the struggle for and achievement of success. It is the inside story of a Napoleon of journalism. The pen name of the author is Laurence North; his real name is J. D. Symon. Mr. Symon has been for ten years editor of the Illustrated London News, and during part of the time, of The English Illustrated. He is now in America, traveling in the interest of a group of English papers.

THOSE who attended the Booksellers' Convention are familiar with the clever little skit, "Cheap Turkey," by Ward Macauley, presented at the banquet as a souvenir. Those who were unable to be present will be interested to obtain this little volume, just published by Duffield & Co. It is the story of the gigantic effort of the Mayor of Blankburgh to reduce the cost of living by doing away with the middleman and selling everything at municipal markets—a system which had humorous as well as disastrous results.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY announce that all the volumes of their popular True Biography Series will be sold at $2.00, net, per volume, after July 1, 1912. This especially applies to "The True William Penn," by Sydney George Fisher; "The True Benjamin Franklin," by Sydney George Fisher; and "The True George Washington," by Paul Leicester Ford, as the other volumes were originally published at the net price. Up until July 1 the three volumes mentioned will be supplied at the regular rate of discount as heretofore.

TRAVELERS in France and French-speaking countries will find a useful volume in the "Larousse de Poche," just published by the Librairie Larousse of Paris. This pocket dictionary contains over 85,000 words, with definitions and pronunciations. The same firm have just issued a two-volume edition of the selected works of Victor Hugo in the "Bibliotheque Larousse" set, and an interesting work on French painting of to-day; "Anthologie d'Art Français: XXe Siècle Peinture," by Charles Saunier, containing 128 photographic reproductions of some of the best-known modern paintings.

OWEN JOHNSON, whose incisive remarks in "Stover at Yale" on the domination of colleges by secret societies started something of a controversy, has begun a series of articles in Collier's, called "The Social Usurpation of Our Colleges." He maintains that Yale, Harvard, Princeton and other colleges are becoming largely "social clearing houses," so that the man with a college degree may be distinguished from the "mere masses." Mr. Johnson is himself a Yale graduate, and he declares that his crusade has the support of men like Senator Beveridge and Woodrow Wilson.

A NEW scheme for an economical substitute for a thumb index is being tried experimentally in the current number of the Wilson Company's Cumulative Index. To find any desired place in the alphabet open anywhere, find the letter wanted in the alphabet printed on the margin of each page. Directly opposite the letter on the trimmed edge, a black marker will be seen; open at this marker, and the letter will be found. A little practice will enable one to find the place in the alphabet by noting the relative position of the markers on the trimmed edge. The letters I, J and K are small and near the center; M and S are readily recognized, because large, and Q because it is very small. From these letters as guides the others may be found quickly. The publishers say that this index will be more useful as the numbers grow in size and users become familiar with it. It is certainly ingenious, but whether it will work out as a practical help may be somewhat doubted.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN CO. publish the following books to-day: "Henrik Ibsen: Plays and Problems," by Professor Otto Heller of Washington University; "Waterways versus Railways," by Harold C. Moulton; "The White Hills in Poetry," an anthology of the White Mountains, edited by Eugene R. Musgrove; "The Story of Christopher Columbus," by Charles W. Moores; four volumes in a new series by A. Wyatt Tilby on "The English People Overseas"; "Charles Dickens: His Life and Work," by Edwin Percy Whipple, in a two-volume limited Riverside Press edition, with an introduction by Arlo Bates; "The Laws of Supply and Demand," by George Binney Dibble; selections from "The Classical Psychologists," edited by Dr. Benjamin Rand of Harvard University; "A History of the United States for Grammar Schools," by Reuben G. Thwaites and C. N. Kendall; and "A Catalogue of the Collection of Historical Material at Simmons College, Boston," prepared by the Committee on Historical Material of the New England Teachers' Association.

WHEN a band of hold-up men startled New York last February by boarding a taxicab near a bank and making off with $25,000 in money, James H. Collins, the magazine writer, was working on a series of articles dealing with police methods, and had been close to the New York Police Department for some weeks. After the robbers had been caught, led to confess and part of the money recovered, he undertook to write a book about the case which would give the story from the police standpoint, and at the same time explain detective methods as they really are, and give people some idea of the efficiency of the New York police. The job of gathering material kept him trailing Commissioner Dougherty three weeks, snatching such odd moments of that official's time as he could spare to talk. Mr. Collins feels that the work was worth it. The book is not a very large one, but it gives an uncolored account of the whole case, and has been written not merely as a story for the general reader, but also as an analysis that can be studied by men practically interested in police work. Mr. Collins has investigated police methods in both New York and London. His book, "The Great Taxicab Robbery," has just been published by the John Lane Company.

BUSINESS NOTES.

AUBURN, CAL.—C. A. Grannell has purchased the entire interest of A. S. Fleming in the firm of Fleming & Grannell, books, stationery and fancy goods.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The firm of Read & White, booksellers and stationers, has been dissolved by mutual consent. The business in the future will be conducted by W. B. Read and W. H. Johnson under the firm name of W. B. Read & Company.

BROWNSVILLE, TEX.—W. W. Webster has succeeded the Webster-Hennessey Company, booksellers and stationers.

BURLINGTON, IA.—James P. Wilson is withdrawing from the firm of Mauro & Wilson, wholesale books and stationery, after many years of service, for a much-needed rest. The business will be continued by the Mauro & Wilson Co.

CHICO, CAL.—Ben E. Tormey has bought the bankrupt stock of Frank N. Miller, bookseller and stationer.

CHILLICOTHE, MO.—G. T. Sailor succeeds H. A. Barton as proprietor of the McIlwrath Book Store.

DULUTH, MINN.—The Catholic Book Store suffered a heavy loss by fire last week.

GOLDEN CITY, MO.—S. J. Adams is the new owner of the Post Office Book Store.

HOLLISTER, CAL.—W. D. Holt has purchased the P. O. News Stand from the Williamson Stationery Company.

LEAD, SO. DAK.—F. W. Brown has purchased the retail book and stationery business of W. B. Perkins, and will continue at the same location.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—B. A. Rogers, who has been widely known as manager and buyer for the Cunningham, Curtiss & Welch branch here, will start business about June 15 under the name of B. A. Rogers & Co., at 427 West Seventh Street, in the Athletic Club Building. He is planning an artistic up-to-date shop, finished in oak throughout, with two large show windows. He requests catalogues and circulars from both publishers and stationers.

LUTHER, MICH.—Mulholland & Son have succeeded George A. Osborne, druggist and bookseller.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The C. N. Caspar Co., booksellers and publishers, have just completed the removal of their stock of books and stationery from 431 East Water Street to 454 East Water Street, one door south of the St. Charles Hotel, on City Hall Square, and just one-half block from the old place. The company had to remove their immense stock, consisting of over 150,000 volumes, and a large supply of stationery, postcards, etc., within a short time, having sold their lease of one more year to the First National Bank for the snug sum of $5000. The bank will erect a modern sixteen-story skyscraper on the premises. The C. N. Caspar Company has procured a lease of their present store for a period of ten years, and will occupy the entire four-story brick building, 22 x 120 feet, having thus more commodious quarters for the book emporium, which was established thirty-four years ago.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—P. J. Kelly, bookseller and stationer, with a circulating library, has sold out to J. W. Woodward.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O.—Walter A. Wyss recently purchased the drug and bookstore of William Kuenzli.

NEW YORK CITY.—The New York office of Atkinson, Mentzer & Company has removed from 24 West 39th Street to 30 West 36th Street. E. F. Lohr, formerly with the Chicago branch, has been transferred to the New York office.

NEW YORK CITY.—The National Temperance Society and Publication House has removed from 3 East 14th Street to the Zindel Building, 373 Fourth Avenue. The new rooms of the society cover 2000 feet of space on the seventh floor. As the building is absolutely fireproof, the valuable James Black Library of the society will now be safely housed.

NEWTON, KAN.—The Herold Book & Publishing Company are going out of the book and fancy goods lines, and will handle only a few office supplies in connection with their printing business.

OSKALOOSA, IA.—Charles H. Ralston recently sold out his book and stationery store to the Waltons. He has opened a news and periodical store in the same building.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—A meeting of the creditors of the H. H. Waldo Book and Stationery Company has been called.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Further details are now at hand concerning the recent failure of the Jett Book and Stationery Company, 912 Olive Street. Total liabilities of $17,053.27 are listed, of which $16,800.46 are unsecured claims. The assets are estimated at $30,363.23, of which $27,000 represents stock in trade, $1558.12 machinery and tools, and $1339.46 debts due it on open accounts. There are several hundred creditors for small amounts. The largest creditors are: Boorum & Pease, New York, $885.88; St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, for rent in the Frisco Building, $2400; American Trust Company, $1000; Mercantile National Bank, $900. The firm is one of the oldest book stores in St. Louis. E. T. Jett, who ran it for a long time, died about a year ago. Six creditors of the company filed the petition asking the appointment of a receiver. The petitioners were Boorum & Pease Company, New York; E. P. Dutton & Co., Thomas Nelson & Sons, Cassell & Co., Ltd.; Boorum & Pease Loose Leaf Book Company, and A. W. Faber & Co.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—The Union Book Co. with Edwin E. Miller as president and Nathan Van Patten as secretary-treasurer, will shortly open a store at 257 State Street.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Raymer's Old Bookstore has moved into larger and more commodious quarters at 12 Bernard Street, and would be pleased to receive catalogues, announcements, etc.

Story of Breton peasant life. Donatienne Louarn leaves her husband and three children to go to Paris to be nurse to a rich baby. Jean, left at home, struggles to keep the poor farm working alone and missing his wife, who seldom writes, and finally stops altogether. The farm is sold for debt and Jean takes to tramping with his three children, joining forces with a woman tramp, and finally settling down to work in a quarry. Donatienne, in spite of her sin, has not forgotten Jean and the children, and has come to loath the man she lives with. After eight years she returns to them, when Jean has been hopelessly crippled by an accident in the quarry and the other woman has deserted him.

Beresford, J: Davis. A candidate for truth. Bost., Little, Brown. c. 486 p. D. $1.35 n.

Takes up the life of Jacob Stahl at the place where author's "The early history of Jacob Stahl" left him. Separated from his wife, without money or employment, Jacob is taken up by the Rev. Cecil Barker, Vicar of St. Marks, Camden Town, who loses interest in him when he finds he is not a difficult case to save. Jacob's struggles to earn a living, the influence of various women upon him, and his meeting with Betty Gale, whom he honestly loves, are told with much insight. Book ends with promise to carry on Jacob's and Betty's story after they have decided to disregard the fact that Jacob's wife is still alive.

She dare not tell her husband, less he strangle the child when it comes, for to him it is little short of murder to bring a child into being amid such surroundings. If only they had the money to go to Wyoming and give the baby a chance in the fresh air and sunlight! Maggie is tempted beyond her strength and steals to get the necessary money. Then her husband finds she is a thief and learns why. In the end all is made right for Maggie.

Hutten, Baroness Bettina von. Sharrow. N. Y., Appleton. c. 458 p. D. $1.30 n.

Sharrow is the family seat of the family of Sharrow, which has been handed down in the male succession for centuries. The hero has all the marked family characteristics, from the ugly face and red hair to the utter devotiton to the family name and tradition. For a while he forgets his heritage, when he is disappointed by one woman and deceived by another, and he goes down into the depths of degradation. In the end, through a fine woman and his little son, he comes into his own again.

"Inglis, J:," pseud. George Wendern gave a party. N. Y., Scribner. c. 301 p. D. $1.25 n.

Story of love and wild-cat speculation. Scene laid in London. George Wendern, a thoroughly honorable man finds himself involved in what he supposes to be a straight business proposition, but which proves a swindle. His way of meeting the situation, whose climax is the party George Wendern gave, is striking and unusual and a marked contrast to the throng of selfish business men and investors also involved. The heroine, an American heiress, ambitious to marry a title, from uncommon and unselfish motives, adds the interest of a love story to the book. Tale is said to be by a well-known novelist. writing under a pseudonym.

Another Dartmoor story by author of "The beacon," etc., Drusilla Whyddon is engaged to Timothy Snow, underkeeper on the Yarner estate, but his uncle, Lot Snow, wants him to marry Audrey Leaman. When Timothy proves obdurate, the old man appeals to Drusilla, telling her it is for her lover's good, so she sends him away. In her grief she wanders into the forest, hoping to die, but is saved by John Redstone a moment after he has murdered old Snow. Timothy goes to Canada, Drusilla learns to love Redstone and marries him. Then Timothy returns, is accused of his uncle's murder, tried and condemned, and is only saved by Redstone's confession just before shooting himself.

Post, Melville Davisson. The nameless thing. N. Y., Appleton. c. 337 p. front. D. $1.25 n.

The stories of crime which the author has here welded together are ingenious and exciting. They all turn on the discovery of the thing done through some very slight trace that the agent has overlooked. The stories are connected by the running discussion of each by three men, each with his own decided philosophy.

Ross, E: Alsworth. Changing America; studies in contemporary society. N. Y., Century Co. c. '08-'12. 236 p. D. $1.20 n.

By author of "The Changing Chinese." Insisting that the opinion we hold of our society is apt to be ten years behind the reality, Professor Ross seizes upon a number of sub-surface tendencies—such as rising divorce, the crowding of women into industry, the falling birth-rate, the commercialization of the newspapers, and the spread of the business man's philosophy—to show how rapidly America is changing. He does not pretend to describe all the pregnant changes, for he gives only the result of such soundings as he has been able to make. When he notes a tendency, he urges specific remedies, not general social reconstruction.

Trafford-Taunton, Winefride. The romance of a state secret. Bost., Estes. 257 p. D. $1.25 n.
Romance of Charles II.'s time. Principal character is the charming, wild Earl of Rochester; the heroine is beautiful Elizabeth Malet. Story is chiefly concerned with the appearance in England of a son of the king, said to have been born of a lawful wife—married during his exile—many semi-authentic accounts exist of such a union. The young heir comes to England, falls in love with Rochester's sweetheart, and the succession to the throne depends upon Elizabeth Malet's love.

Tuttle, Margaretta. His worldly goods; with front. in color by Paul Meylan. Indianapolis, Bobbs-Merrill. c. 410 p. front. D. $1.25 n.
Dr. Carleton Thorne is commissioned by a woman of wealth to stay at a Long Island farm house to look after a man suffering from nervous shock. This man is Nadine Carson's husband, who has made her a life a long drawn-out misery. Wrexford Thorne, Carlton's brother, meets Nadine and falls in love with her. A man comes forward saying that Colin Carson was married before he met Nadine, and she believes that she is free to marry Thorne when the proof fails. Carson becomes violently insane, escapes from the sanitarium and almost kills his wife, who discovers in a most dramatic manner that she has never been bound to him.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in MAY, 1912

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where no specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look hereafter under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e., GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

SULZER'S SHORT SPEECHES

By the Hon. WM. SULZER

Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives

Carefully Compiled from the Records of Congress, with Other Official Data and a Brief Biographical Sketch by

GEORGE W. BLAKE, of the New York Times

A BOOK WORTH WHILE!

Full of Valuable Information—WHY?

Because it gives political history for the past quarter of a century; and tells about live issues and matters of public moment. Because of the style; the terse epigrams; the patriotic sentiments; the vivid word pictures; and the purity of diction of the speeches. Because the greatest political campaign in our history is now on, and you should be posted on questions of the day. Because these short speeches, by one of the foremost leaders in American public life, will post you and give you valuable information on more than a hundred world topics. Because the book is about you, directly or indirectly, and should be read by every intelligent and patriotic citizen in America.

"SULZER'S SHORT SPEECHES" contains 300 pages—90 speeches—bound in cloth, price, $1.00, and in paper covers, price, 25 cents.

BOTH SIDES of the SHIELD

By Major Archibald W. Butt

The romance of a Northern newspaper correspondent on special duty in the South, the reading of which is like listening to a friend tell of actual experiences. The reality of the story and characters is so strong that one feels on closing the book that the author must surely have given us a few pages from his own life. It is as delightful as might be expected from the writer's personality.

The PENITENT

By René Bazin

Author of "The Nun"

This exquisite study of a tragedy is one of René Bazin's strongest novels. This great French writer's visit to America has aroused considerable interest in his work and THE PENITENT will have a quick and steady sale.
